

“The Fiji National University (FNU) is committed to embracing digital technology, offering more programmes online and in blended mode, and the COVID-19 pandemic has accelerated this initiative. Vodafone’s reliable internet-based solutions have assisted the university to operate effectively during COVID-19. This ensures that students can continue with their studies remotely when face-to-face delivery is not possible due to public health measures. At the same time, digital technology enables FNU staff to work from home and University operations to run as normal. Vodafone Fiji has also generously extended free access for all FNU students and staff to access digital resources, services, learning and teaching material.”

Professor Toby Wilkinson
Vice-Chancellor,
Fiji National University

